

Just in time for kick-off with time:matters

Sameday deliveries to many sites of the 2012 European Football Championship

Neu-Isenburg, June 22, 2012: time:matters, the expert for global Special Speed Logistics, brings its customers even closer to the 2012 European Football Championship with tailor-made transport concepts for highly urgent shipments.

Through the fastest possible transport by air, rail or road and an elaborate network consisting of over 500 logistics partners, time:matters delivers urgent cargo to numerous sites of the European Championship in Poland and Ukraine in the shortest amount of time. Therefore, an important shipment only requires for example five hours from Munich to the National Stadium in Warsaw, including pick-up and delivery from door to door.

Franz-Joseph Miller, CEO of time:matters GmbH, puts it in a nutshell: "Due to our fast and customized solutions, our customers always remain on the ball in highly urgent situations. At the same time, you benefit from a well-organized service and the flexibility, which we offer through our comprehensive transport network. We have already delivered several exciting shipments under high pressure to their destinations at the current European Football Championship – and even on the same day. Regardless of whether forgotten football shoes belonging to a star player, urgent spare parts for a television team's technicians or bulky equipment for one of the top teams – we make it all possible for our customers. Of course this also applies once the European Championship is over, since we offer our customers tailor-made solutions anytime – for example for the Tour de France, the Olympic Games in London and naturally for any other occasion."
