

time:matters expands its Chinese network

Neu-Isenburg, January 24, 2013: time:matters, the expert for international Special Speed Logistics, further expands its network in China. From now on, in addition to fast transport times with designated handling and customs clearance of shipments in Shanghai and Hong Kong, customers will especially benefit from the significantly increased amount of delivery options throughout China.

time:matters services go far beyond standard transport solutions. Whereas the customary procedure usually consists of flying to individual Chinese hubs and then offering lengthy transports by road, time:matters transports shipments by plane for its customers in cooperation with partner airlines - even to infrastructurally remote domestic destinations.

Due to this superior combination of speed and extensive coverage, regions of economic growth such as Wuhan, Xi'an, Shenyang, Dalian, Shenzhen or Qingdao, can be reached from Frankfurt or Munich within 60-70 hours, which includes customs clearance.

Franz-Joseph Miller, CEO of time:matters GmbH, explains: "Our customers have very high standards for modern premium logistics solutions. In addition to the sheer speed, elaborate routes to rather remote destinations are becoming increasingly important – especially in Asia. That's precisely what we provide with our solutions for the Chinese market and, in doing so, enable our customers and their end customers an even better, faster and more reliable service."
